Cage Squads of Northwest Bid For Title

SEATTLE.—Washington and Washington State College again are favored to be contenders for the 1933 northern division Pacific Coast Conference basketball title.

The champion Huskies under Coach Hec Edmundson have held top honors regularly in the northern division, but have fallen before California and Southern California in the play-off for coast conference honors.

In practice games, Washington looked impressive, Coach Edmundson said. The first string lineup will find John Fuller at center, Hanover and Weber at forwards, and Cook and Heaman, guards.

Pete Antonich, reserve end on the Washington varsity football team, and his brother, Mark Antonich, reserve tackle, probably will break into several games this season.

Coach Edmundson plans to stick by a man-to-man defense and use a fast-breaking offense.

The Cougars of Washington State, aced out of the northern division title last year by Washington, may be without the services of the All-Coast center, Huntley Gordon. The big fellow has been sick and may not remain in school.

Oregon State stakes its chances of getting somewhere on the ability of lanky, frail Ed Lewis, center. He broke his hand last year and Oregon State's play suffered.

Oregon, coached by Bill Reinhardt, always is a threat, although his material may be mediocre. The Oregon boys are taught a fast-breaking offense that pleases fans.

Idaho may turn up with a good quintet under Coach Rich Fox.

Auto "Snow Ferry" Over Sierra, Again Placed In Service

With highway travel over the mile-high Sierra summit rendered hazardous again by winter snows, the Southern Pacific Company has resumed operation of its novel "snow ferry" for the transportation of automobiles between Sacramento and Reno, it was announced today.

The service is the same as that provided during the winter months last year, autos being checked either at Reno or Sacramento and carried over the mountains at low cost on passenger trains in specially constructed cars.

Eastbound, the automobiles will be carried on the train leaving Sacramento at 10:30 p. m., arriving in Reno at 2:55 a. m., it was stated. Westbound, the service will be given on the train leaving Reno at 10:25 p. m., arriving in Sacramento at 4:15 a. m.

Permitting prompt passage of autos and the occupants over the Sierra when highways are blocked by snow or made dangerous by ice, the so-called snow ferry is one of Southern Pacific's many innovations in recent years.
